

Telling piece by Dominic Lawson in the Sunday times 'An inconvenient truth: fossil fuels aren't going'. (link below), and DH comment on coming clash between climate reality and climate rhetoric:

Excellent article confirming how climate reality and rhetoric are about to clash head on. Global emissions are about to start rising again after the Covid pause, driven by the Asian utilities, and our UK net zero will contribute zero to checking them. Wrote a whole book about this four years ago -Energy Empires in Collision. No policy-maker and few media (except the excellent Emily Gosden) read it. Now they are about to learn, and people who are bearing the enormous cost will be furious.
